11. (New) A disposable and inexpensive floor mounted pad for placement on a floor surface, directly in front of a wall mounted urinal for absorbing fluid not deposited within the confinements of the urinal which would otherwise drip on the floor, said pad comprising:

a pad body, including:

a first layer of fluid absorbing material;

a second layer of fluid impervious material bonded to said first layer of fluid absorbing material, said second layer constructed of a non-slip fluid impervious material; and a quantity of adhesive material attached to said second layer opposite said first layer, whereby said pad body may be adhesively secured to the floor in front of a urinal;

said pad body being constructed in a substantially flat truncated annular sector resembling a truncated pie slice.

12. (New) The floor mounted pad of claim 11, further comprising an anti-microbial agent permeating the pad.
